

criminals. They violated a simple request. All they had to do was to comply, but they didn't. We intend to prove to you that they not only did these acts, but told others about their beliefs, further spreading a hoax made out of fear. And what they told those people scared them, as you will hear in the coming days. I urge you to keep in mind that justice must prevail over those who break the law. The law is meant to prevent the very acts they committed. Now you are here to stop this fracture of the law. Thank you.

COURT: Thank you Mr. Wright. Does the defense like to make a statement, they would, alright then. Mr. Stevens?

MR. STEVENS: I am glad this is here in a court of law. The government now is in it's mode of persecution of the truth. My clients are scientists who found out something the government does not want you to know. That is it. That is it. Each of the defendants knows the truth, but the government will not allow that. I tell you this short fact. We agree to most of the indictment beyond one thing. What they told others, what they wrote, is not a hoax. It just isn't! After agreeing with most of the indictment, the only way I can do my job as a